Let's Make a Deal: Contract Terms to Bring Up in Negotiations

(Factors hospital managers should consider to boost their hospital's budgets for medical, surgical supplies include prepayment of a purchased product)

...supplier. This allows hospitals to enhance their product line management and receive increased volume rebates.

Service terms. Virtually all equipment comes with a certain period of warranty, either expressed or implied. During this period, service is usually provided at no cost to the hospital or at markedly discounted rates. After the warranty period...

...the extension of an original warranty period may be a valuable "bargaining chip" when negotiating equipment contracts.

The value of such a concession can be estimated by studying what a service agreement would cost during the period of extension. Assume, for example, that a hospital wants to buy diagnostic imaging equipment and has negotiated a 15 percent discount worth $150,000 off the list price of...

...20 percent discount, but the supplier balks at providing the additional 5 percent. Instead, the supplier offers to extend the equipment warranty for the service contract from one year to two years.

The hospital researches this offer and realizes it has a net present value of approximately $100,000. The overall discount on the equipment plus the extended service contract approximates the 20 percent discount originally desired by the hospital. Both parties are satisfied and the contract is finalized.

Patrick E. Carroll is president of Patrick...
